Dianne Hofmeyr's book, Eye of the Sun: A Journey Through the African Diaspora, is a sweeping and ambitious work that explores the history and legacy of the African diaspora through the lens of art, literature, and music. Hofmeyr traces the movement of Africans across continents and centuries, from the forced migration of the slave trade to the voluntary migrations of the 20th and 21st centuries. She argues that the African diaspora is a dynamic and ever-changing phenomenon, one that has shaped the world in countless ways.

Hofmeyr's book is divided into three parts. The first part, "The Middle Passage," explores the horrors of the slave trade and its impact on African peoples. The second part, "The New World," examines the experiences of Africans in the Americas, the Caribbean, and Europe. The third part, "The African Diaspora Today," looks at the contemporary African diaspora and its impact on global culture.

Throughout the book, Hofmeyr draws on a wide range of sources, including art, literature, music, film, and personal narratives. She argues that these sources can provide valuable insights into the lived experiences of Africans in the diaspora. For example, she discusses the work of the Haitian artist Jean-Michel Basquiat, who used his art to explore the themes of race, identity, and history. She also discusses the work of the Nigerian writer Chinua Achebe, who wrote about the impact of colonialism on African societies. And she discusses the work of the American musician Bob Marley, who used his music to spread a message of peace and unity.

Hofmeyr's book is a powerful and moving account of the African diaspora. It is a book that will challenge your assumptions and open your eyes to the richness and diversity of African cultures. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the history of the African diaspora and its impact on the world.

Quotes from Eye of the Sun

"The African diaspora is a complex and ever-changing phenomenon, one that has shaped the world in countless ways."—Dianne Hofmeyr

"The Middle Passage was a horrific experience for millions of Africans. It was a journey that left an indelible mark on the African diaspora."—Dianne Hofmeyr

"The New World was a place of both opportunity and challenge for Africans. It was a place where they could escape the horrors of slavery, but it was also a place where they faced new forms of discrimination and oppression."—Dianne Hofmeyr

"The African diaspora today is a vibrant and growing community. It is a community that is making significant contributions to global culture."—
Dianne Hofmeyr
