

How Donald Trump Will Change Canada Even If Justin Trudeau Doesn't Know It Yet

Donald Trump's election as president of the United States has sent shockwaves through Canada. Many Canadians are worried about what Trump's policies will mean for their country. Will he tear up the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA)? Will he impose tariffs on Canadian goods? Will he build a wall on the border between the two countries?

The truth is, we don't know for sure what Trump will do. But we can make some educated guesses based on his campaign promises and his past behavior. Here are five ways that Trump could change Canada:

1. NAFTA

NAFTA is a free trade agreement between Canada, the United States, and Mexico. It has been in place since 1994, and it has boosted trade between the three countries.

Trump has repeatedly said that he wants to renegotiate NAFTA. He claims that the deal is unfair to the United States, and he wants to make it more favorable to American workers.

If Trump does renegotiate NAFTA, it could have a significant impact on Canada. Canadian businesses rely on NAFTA to export their goods to the United States. If the deal is changed, it could make it more expensive for Canadian businesses to do business in the United States.

2. Tariffs

A tariff is a tax on imported goods. Trump has threatened to impose tariffs on goods from China, Mexico, and other countries.

If Trump does impose tariffs on Canadian goods, it could hurt Canadian businesses. Canadian businesses rely on exports to the United States, and tariffs would make their products more expensive for American consumers.

3. Border wall

Trump has promised to build a wall on the border between the United States and Mexico. He has also said that he will make it more difficult for people to enter the United States illegally.

If Trump does build a wall, it could have a significant impact on Canada. Many Canadians cross the border into the United States every day for work or pleasure. A wall would make it more difficult for Canadians to travel to the United States.

4. Climate change

Trump has said that he does not believe in climate change. He has also promised to withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement on climate change.

If Trump does withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement, it could have a negative impact on Canada. Canada is a signatory to the Paris Agreement, and it has committed to reducing its greenhouse gas emissions.

5. Foreign policy

Trump has promised to change the United States' foreign policy. He has said that he will put America first and that he will not be afraid to use military force.

If Trump does change the United States' foreign policy, it could have a significant impact on Canada. Canada has been a close ally of the United States for many years, and it relies on the United States for its security.

It is still too early to say exactly how Donald Trump will change Canada. But it is clear that his election has the potential to have a significant impact on our country.

Canadians need to be prepared for change. We need to be ready to defend our interests and to work with the United States to find common ground.

We also need to remember that Canada is a strong and independent country. We have weathered many storms in the past, and we will weather this one too.
