Released in 2004, Hotel Rwanda is a gripping and emotionally charged historical drama that recounts the true story of the Rwandan genocide and the role of the Hotel des Mille Collines in providing refuge to thousands of Tutsi refugees.

The film stars Don Cheadle as Paul Rusesabagina, a Hutu hotel manager who risked his own life to protect the Tutsi refugees who had sought shelter in his hotel. Sophie Okonedo plays Tatiana Rusesabagina, Paul's Tutsi wife, who also played a vital role in the rescue effort.

The film was directed by Terry George, who co-wrote the screenplay with Keir Pearson. George was inspired to make the film after reading an article about Rusesabagina's story in The New York Times.

Hotel Rwanda was a critical and commercial success. It was nominated for three Academy Awards, including Best Picture, and won the BAFTA Award for Best British Film.

The film has been praised for its powerful storytelling, its unflinching depiction of the genocide, and its hopeful message of survival and redemption. It has also been used as a teaching tool to raise awareness of the Rwandan genocide and to promote peace and reconciliation.

The Rwandan Genocide

The Rwandan genocide was a systematic and intentional killing of Tutsi people by Hutu people. The genocide took place over a period of 100 days, from April to July 1994. During that time, an estimated 800,000 Tutsi people were killed.

The genocide was sparked by the assassination of Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana on April 6, 1994. Habyarimana's death triggered a wave of violence against Tutsi people, who were blamed for his death.

The genocide was carried out by Hutu militias, government forces, and ordinary citizens. The militias were armed with machetes, clubs, and guns. They went from house to house, killing Tutsi people and burning their homes.

The Rwandan genocide was one of the most horrific events in human history. It is a reminder of the dangers of hatred and intolerance.

The Hotel des Mille Collines

The Hotel des Mille Collines is a four-star hotel located in Kigali, Rwanda. During the Rwandan genocide, the hotel became a refuge for thousands of Tutsi refugees.

The hotel was managed by Paul Rusesabagina, a Hutu man who risked his own life to protect the Tutsi refugees. Rusesabagina used his connections with the Hutu government and the Rwandan military to negotiate safe passage for the refugees.

The Hotel des Mille Collines was a lifeline for the Tutsi refugees. It provided them with food, shelter, and protection from the violence outside.

The hotel's staff also played a vital role in the rescue effort. They risked their own lives to help the refugees escape from the hotel and to find safe haven.

The Hotel des Mille Collines is a symbol of hope and courage. It is a reminder of the power of one person to make a difference.

Paul Rusesabagina

Paul Rusesabagina is a Hutu man who saved the lives of over 1,200 Tutsi refugees during the Rwandan genocide. He was the manager of the Hotel des Mille Collines in Kigali, Rwanda, where the refugees sought refuge.

Rusesabagina was born in 1954 in Kigali. He is the son of a Hutu father and a Tutsi mother. Rusesabagina grew up in a time of ethnic tension between the Hutu and Tutsi people.

In 1994, the Rwandan genocide began. Rusesabagina's hotel quickly became a refuge for Tutsi refugees. Rusesabagina used his connections with the Hutu government and the Rwandan military to negotiate safe passage for the refugees.

Rusesabagina's actions saved the lives of thousands of Tutsi people. He is a hero who risked his own life to make a difference.

Rusesabagina has been recognized for his heroism. He has received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the highest civilian award in the United States. He has also been awarded the Raoul Wallenberg Award, which is given to people who have saved the lives of others during genocide.

The Legacy of Hotel Rwanda

Hotel Rwanda is a powerful and moving film that has had a lasting impact. The film has raised awareness of the Rwandan genocide and has helped to promote peace and reconciliation.

The film has also inspired a number of initiatives to help the survivors of the genocide. The Paul Rusesabagina Foundation provides scholarships to Rwandan students who are studying in the United States. The foundation also supports a number of other initiatives to help the survivors of the genocide.

Hotel Rwanda is a film that will continue to be remembered for its powerful storytelling, its unflinching depiction of the genocide, and its hopeful message of survival and redemption.

Inside the Hotel Rwanda is a powerful and moving film that tells the true story of the Rwandan genocide and the role of the Hotel des Mille Collines in providing refuge to thousands of Tutsi refugees. The film is a powerful
