Savannah Terrace Zepke is a historic mansion in Savannah, Georgia, that is said to be haunted by the ghosts of its former residents. The mansion was built in 1851 by George Welshman, a wealthy cotton planter. The Welshman family lived in the mansion for several years before selling it to the Zepke family in 1875. The Zepkes lived in the mansion for over 100 years before selling it to the city of Savannah in 1983.

The mansion is said to be haunted by the ghosts of several people, including the former owner, George Welshman. Welshman is said to have died in the mansion in 1889, and his ghost is said to haunt the mansion's third floor. Other ghosts that are said to haunt the mansion include a young woman named Mary, who is said to have died in the mansion in the early 1900s, and a man named John, who is said to have been a slave who was murdered in the mansion in the 1860s.

There have been many reports of paranormal activity in the mansion over the years. Guests and staff have reported seeing ghosts, hearing strange noises, and feeling cold spots. Some guests have even reported being touched or pushed by unseen forces.

The mansion is now a popular tourist attraction, and many people visit it each year to experience its haunted history. The mansion is also a popular location for ghost tours, and several different tour companies offer tours of the mansion.
